

Rospotrebnadzor canceled all coronavirus measures for those arriving in the Russian Federation, except for the requirement for PCR

According to the Decree of Rospotrebnadzor, which entered into force on July 2, 2022, PCR testing for foreign citizens upon arrival to Russia remains in force

On July 2, 2022, the Decree of the Chief Sanitary Doctor No. 18 dated June 20, 2022 was published and entered into force, according to which some of the previously introduced anti-COVID measures on the territory of Russia, as well as upon entering Russia, are suspended.

In particular, the following requirements are cancelled:

- for self-isolation of Russian citizens arriving from abroad until the test results are received;
- for self-isolation of foreign citizens arriving to Russia until the test results are received;
- mask regime;
- the requirement of social distance in public places;
- a ban of mass events and limiting the number of their participants;
- prohibition of public catering activity at night;
- work restrictions for the people with chronic diseases and aged over 65;
- the requirements for transport disinfection have also been relaxed.

The requirement for a negative PCR test for foreign citizens and stateless persons arriving in Russia is still in force.
